FOOD PRICES RISE HERE.

Increase 2 Per Cent in November Labor Department Says.

Retail and wholesale food prices throughout the country increased 2 per cent or more during November, according to figures made available today by the Labor Department. Notwithstanding this increase, the department said, the cost of living was 5 per cent for the year ended November in retail food prices, while wholesale food prices increased about 2 1/2 per cent during the year.

As compared with 1913 retail food costs in November in Washington were 54 per cent higher, only one city exceeding Washington, food prices having risen 56 per cent in Richmond. The trend of wholesale prices of commodities such as farm products, textiles, metals, building materials, chemicals and lumbering goods was upward during November to the extent of 1-1/2 per cent. Farm products led with an increase of 18 1/2 per cent. Chemicals alone were cheaper in November of this year as compared with the same month last year.
